Launch Control XL 3 — Template (two controllers) — ambient · techno · house

Basis for all three tracks. Every row means the same on both controllers and in every track: row 1 = brightness, row 2 = space, row 3 = character (calm ↔ lively), fader = how much of it, button 1 = change, button 2 = a moment, right now.

Jojo plays the foundation (beat and bass) on all 8 columns. Jonas plays the colour (chords and melodies) on columns 1–7; Jonas' column 8 controls everything: both controllers and the Launchkey.

Examples per column: A = ambient, T = groove techno, H = happy house. Every track starts with all faders down, and with all knobs at 0 it must already sound good.

Button 2 Moment	CC 45 Freeze holds the current chord while held.	CC 46 Stab one accent chord, now.	CC 47 Octave one octave up while held.	CC 48 Echo throw the last note echoes away.	CC 49 Answer plays one phrase, now.	CC 50 Burst one quick run of sparkles.	CC 51 Hit one FX hit / impact.	CC 52 Break / Drop 1st: beat out. 2nd: all back on the one.

Guide

One language, three tracks

The rows never change their meaning: row 1 = brightness, row 2 = space, row 3 = character, fader = how much, button 1 = change, button 2 = a moment. Whoever learned it in the ambient track can play techno and house without a new explanation.

The columns keep their role: Jojo's column 1 is always the heartbeat (a soft thump in ambient, the kick in techno and house) and column 2 the noise or rumble glued to it; Jonas' column 4 is always the main melody. The sound behind it changes, the job stays.

Left = low and long, right = high and short, on both controllers.

Two players

Jojo is the foundation: beat and bass, the floor everybody stands on. Jonas is the colour: chords and melodies on top, plus the global column 8, which acts on everything (both controllers and the Launchkey).

Jojo has no global column on purpose: the global hand is one person, so there is never a fight about master level, tension or the drop.

Learning path

In ambient: faders, brightness and space only. Slow, forgiving, nothing can go wrong. Buttons hardly matter yet.

In techno: the same controls, plus time. Button 1 (change) and button 2 (moments), row 3 for groove and density.

In house: plus harmony and drama. Chapter changes the chords, Tension and Break / Drop shape build-ups. Now the two players have to agree: Jojo drops the beat, Jonas brings it back.

Rules for every track

Every position sounds good: ranges are limited, no fader is too loud, no filter goes silent, melodies stay in key.

All knobs at 0 is the default sound and must already sound good: soft kick, plain backbeat, steady percussion, warm colour. Turning up adds, it does not repair.

Jojo's button 1 has at most 3 patterns per column: the foundation should be easy to steer. Jonas may have more.

Kick, rumble, sub and bass are tuned to the key of the track, so the low end sounds like one instrument.

Sound: raw and warm rather than glossy (no EDM sheen): a little drive, noise and detune, gentle glides (at most a semitone), echoes and room instead of bright synth leads.

Every control is clearly audible. A control nobody can hear is left grey (unused) rather than mapped.

Start with all faders down and build the track up together. That way the controller and the code agree from the first second.

A track may leave columns empty or swap an example, but never move a role to another column or a meaning to another row.

Launchkey 25 MK4 (open)

Still to be decided: what the Launchkey plays (keys for melody, pads for drums, …). Fixed already: Jonas' column 8 controls it too. Master level, Fog, Room and Tension act on its sound, Chapter changes its key and chords, Break / Drop includes it.
